Men Who Knew Much. By James Hu-cker, and "The Indianians in Drama," by Charles Henry Meltzer.

A large part of the current number of Poet Lore is taken up by what is called a dramatic poem, although its form is prose. It is called "The Master of the House," and is written by Adolph Wilbrandt. Essays are for their theme, "The Use of the Ugly in Art," "Child Roland to the Tower Came," "The Legend of the 'Dom-culus' and 'Walter Pater' in the School of Literature," department all suggestions for the study of "Romans" and of Tennyson's "In Memoriam."

The Delineator, while retaining all its former admirable features which made it a guide in the field of feminine fashions, has taken a rank much higher than that of a mere fashion magazine. Many well-known writers contribute to its literary department.

The July issue, already out, is made notable by the first of a series of articles descriptive of "The Master of the House," with illustrations showing the style of coloring adopted for the buildings. As a color scheme of the buildings, their most distinctive feature, this reproduction is of especial interest. These plates have been taken directly from the original water-color sketches of C. Y. Turner, director of color to the exposition.

The International Studio for June contains some unsurpassed specimens of color printing. Illustrations accompanying an article on "The Medalist's Art" show the copper-bronze of the medals and "placequettes" with its burnish and reflected lights in making the perfection of the activity of the objects. The study of the medium-making is of much interest. Another fine bit of coloring is the reproduction of the art of the "King's Cup" in the British Museum. The paper in which this cup is used is a fine example of the art of the "King's Cup" in the British used is a fine example of the art of the on the negroes' conception of law at the time of their emancipation. One morning, when Virginia was still under the military rule of the Northern army, a man riding along the road saw a poor old negro woman, by the roadside, on being questioned as to the cause of her sorrow she replied "my old man has just gone off. He said he'd do it. He had done it and our marriage is derefor canceled."

Mr. H. E. Krehbiel's long delayed book on "The Pianoforte and Its Music" is at last definitely in sight. The author has advanced his writing far enough to positively promise it for the early fall. This will complete the quintet of popular books on music which the Scribners have been publishing under the name of "The Music Library." The first of the series, "The Orchestra and Orchestral Music" was the first of the series. This was followed last fall by Henry F. Finck's "Songs and Song Writers," while the two spring publications were Arthur H. Meyer's "Choirs and Choirs" and William F. Apthorp's "Opera,

Past and Present."

Guard fatally stabbed Clarence Linville while engaged in an altercation. Guard in jail. Linville is dying. Guard asserts that he and an employee of Linville had some trouble about a week ago, and when they met last evening the quarrel was renewed. Linville being present, took the part of his employee, and in the scuffle that followed Linville was stabbed by Guard.

Policeman Assaulted.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 9.—Abe Seizer, the son of a prominent merchant, is in jail, charged with assault upon Patrolman Henry Dillman, and his trial is postponed until the result of the officer's injuries are determined. Seizer struck a woman with whom he had been associating, and when arrested made a vicious attack on the officer. The two men and the woman went down in the street in a heap, and during the struggle Seizer's face was kicked in by one of the men. His revolver, which he had taken from his pocket, was taken from him and he was taken to the hospital. He was rescued by officers. Dillman was taken home in an unconscious condition.

Verdict for $3,000 Damages.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., June 9.—Judge

White at Rockville yesterday decided the question now first raised in the State of Indiana, to wit: Whether a widow is an agent for the county in looking after the children that are under the care of the county. When the court decided in favor of the plaintiff, Charles Keister, who had been appointed by the county to look after the children of a deceased woman, the plaintiff was awarded $3,000 in damages.
